HIGH ALERT: SCAM WARNING!!!

TO ALL SUPPLIERS AND SERVICE PROVIDERS OF THE GOVERNMENT PRINTING WORKS

It has come to the attention of the GOVERNMENT PRINTING WORKS that there are certain unscrupulous companies and individuals who are defrauding unsuspecting businesses disguised as representatives of the Government Printing Works (GPW).

The scam involves the fraudsters using the letterhead of GPW to send out fake tender bids to companies and requests to supply equipment and goods.

Although the contact person's name on the letter may be of an existing official, the contact details on the letter are not the same as the Government Printing Works'. When searching on the Internet for the address of the company that has sent the fake tender document, the address does not exist.

The banking details are in a private name and not company name. Government will never ask you to deposit any funds for any business transaction. GPW has alerted the relevant law enforcement authorities to investigate this scam to protect legitimate businesses as well as the name of the organisation.

Example of e-mails these fraudsters are using:

PROCUREMENT@GPW-GOV.ORG

Should you suspect that you are a victim of a scam, you must urgently contact the police and inform the GPW.

GPW has an official email with the domain as @gpw.gov.za

Government e-mails DO NOT have org in their e-mail addresses. All of these fraudsters also use the same or very similar telephone numbers. Although such number with an area code 012 looks like a landline, it is not fixed to any property.

GPW will never send you an e-mail asking you to supply equipment and goods without a purchase/order number. GPW does not procure goods for another level of Government. The organisation will not be liable for actions that result in companies or individuals being resultant victims of such a scam.

Government Printing Works gives businesses the opportunity to supply goods and services through RFQ / Tendering process. In order to be eligible to bid to provide goods and services, suppliers must be registered on the National Treasury's Central Supplier Database (CSD). To be registered, they must meet all current legislative requirements (e.g. have a valid tax clearance certificate and be in good standing with the South African Revenue Services - SARS).

The tender process is managed through the Supply Chain Management (SCM) system of the department. SCM is highly regulated to minimise the risk of fraud, and to meet objectives which include value for money, open and effective competition, equitability, accountability, fair dealing, transparency and an ethical approach. Relevant legislation, regulations, policies, guidelines and instructions can be found on the tender's website.

Fake Tenders

National Treasury's CSD has launched the Government Order Scam campaign to combat fraudulent requests for quotes (RFQs). Such fraudulent requests have resulted in innocent companies losing money. We work hard at preventing and fighting fraud, but criminal activity is always a risk.

How tender scams work

There are many types of tender scams. Here are some of the more frequent scenarios:

Fraudsters use what appears to be government department stationery with fictitious logos and contact details to send a fake RFQ to a company to invite it to urgently supply goods. Shortly after the company has submitted its quote, it receives notification that it has won the tender. The company delivers the goods to someone who poses as an official or at a fake site. The Department has no idea of this transaction made in its name. The company is then never paid and suffers a loss.

OR

Fraudsters use what appears to be government department stationery with fictitious logos and contact details to send a fake RFQ to Company A to invite it to urgently supply goods. Typically, the tender specification is so unique that only Company B (a fictitious company created by the fraudster) can supply the goods in question.

Shortly after Company A has submitted its quote it receives notification that it has won the tender. Company A orders the goods and pays a deposit to the fictitious Company B. Once Company B receives the money, it disappears. Company A's money is stolen in the process.

Protect yourself from being scammed

- If you are registered on the supplier databases and you receive a request to tender or quote that seems to be from a government department, contact the department to confirm that the request is legitimate. Do not use the contact details on the tender document as these might be fraudulent.
- Compare tender details with those that appear in the Tender Bulletin, available online at www.gpwonline.co.za
- Make sure you familiarise yourself with how government procures goods and services. Visit the tender website for more information on how to tender.
- If you are uncomfortable about the request received, consider visiting the government department and/or the place of delivery and/or the service provider from whom you will be sourcing the goods.
- In the unlikely event that you are asked for a deposit to make a bid, contact the SCM unit of the department in question to ask whether this is in fact correct.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE ADMINISTRATION COMMISSION

CUSTOMS TARIFF APPLICATIONS

LIST 05/2024

The International Trade Administration Commission (herein after referred to as ITAC or the Commission) has received the following applications concerning the Customs Tariff. Any objection to or comment on these representations should be submitted to the Chief Commissioner, ITAC, Private Bag X753, Pretoria, 0001. Attention is drawn to the fact that the rate of duty mentioned in these applications is that requested by the applicant and that the Commission may, depending on its findings, recommend a lower or higher rate of duty.

CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

The submission of confidential information to the Commission in connection with customs tariff applications is governed by section 3 of the Tariff Investigations Regulations, which regulations can be found on ITAC's website at http://www.itac.org.za/documents/R.397.pdf.
These regulations require that if any information is considered to be confidential, then a non-confidential version of the information must be submitted, simultaneously with the confidential version. In submitting a non-confidential version the regulations are strictly applicable and require parties to indicate:

- Each instance where confidential information has been omitted and the reasons for confidentiality;
- A summary of the confidential information which permits other interested parties a reasonable understanding of the substance of the confidential information; and
- In exceptional cases, where information is not susceptible to summary, reasons must be submitted to this effect.

This rule applies to all parties and to all correspondence with and submissions to the Commission, which unless clearly indicated to be confidential, will be made available to other interested parties.

The Commission will disregard any information indicated to be confidential that is not accompanied by a proper non-confidential summary or the aforementioned reasons.
If a party considers that any document of another party, on which that party is submitting representations, does not comply with the above rules and that such deficiency affects that party's ability to make meaningful representations, the details of the deficiency and the reasons why that party's rights are so affected must be submitted to the commission in writing forthwith (and at the latest 14 days prior to the date on which that party's submission is due).
Failure to do so timeously will seriously hamper the proper administration of the investigation, and such party will not be able to subsequently claim an inability to make meaningful representations on the basis of the failure of such other party to meet the requirements.

1. INCREASE IN THE GENERAL RATE OF CUSTOMS DUTY APPLICABLE TO:

"Rails, classifiable under tariff subheading 7302.10, from 5 per cent to 10 per cent ad valorem".

AS REASONS FOR THE APPLICATION, THE APPLICANT CITED, AMONGST OTHERS, THE FOLLOWING:

- In 2022, ArcelorMittal South Africa (AMSA) launched the production of mainline rail at its newly acquired AMRAS facility in Emalahleni. The acquisition signals the revival of local mainline rail manufacturing capability, making AMRAS the sole producer of mainline rail in sub-Saharan Africa;

- Products needed for railway infrastructure development can now be developed and sources locally, acting as a catalyst for the growth of the South African economy and the steel industry;

- This localisation effort enables the replacement of imported steel with local production, contributing significantly to the growth of the local steel industry;

- The plant is currently operating at significantly low capacity. Therefore, import replacement will enable the company to reach sustainable operating levels, reduce marginal cost of production and enhance overall competitiveness; and

- The African continental free trade agreements strengthen South Africa's position as a supplier of rail products in the continent.

Palm oil, not fractionated, partly or wholly hydrogenated, whether or not refined, but not further prepared, classifiable in tariff subheading 1516.20.90, for use in the manufacture of soaps and organic surface-active products and preparations, in the form of bars, cakes, moulded pieces or shapes.

AS MOTIVATION FOR THE APPLICATION, THE APPLICANT SUBMITTED, INTER ALIA, THAT:

Unilever South Africa faces challenges due to rising costs, inflation, and competition from cheaper imports. Furthermore, the company is altering its formulation for producing soap bars to support its strategy of sourcing sustainable materials to prevent harm to people and plants. This formulation utilizes palm oil, which currently attracts a 10% duty. A rebate on the duty on imported palm oil is therefore necessary to maintain local manufacturing and competitiveness in the domestic market. While alternatives like sunflower and soybean oils exist, they require additional processing, increasing costs and making them less competitive compared to palm oil.

AS MOTIVATION FOR THE APPLICATION, THE APPLICANT SUBMITTED, INTER ALIA, THAT:

- There has been a significant increase in imports of Aluminium Chlorohydrate (ACH), increasing by over 80% since 2021. The majority of these imports, approximately 70%, originate from India.
- Accordingly, the increasing imports have surpassed MCFI's sales volumes, resulting in a gradual erosion of its market share. This trend has led to a significant portion of MCFI's production capacity remaining unused.
- Therefore, the duty increase is necessary to level the playing field as producers in India benefit from export incentives and subsides allowing them to export at lower prices.

WHO guideline for non-surgical management of chronic primary low back pain in adults in primary and community care settings
Executive summary

Executive summary

Introduction

Low back pain (LBP) is a very common condition experienced by most people across their life course. In 2020, approximately one in 13 people globally experienced LBP, equating to an estimated 619 million people; this represents a 60% increase in cases since 1990. Within this same period, absolute global disability estimates attributed to LBP have increased by about the same amount, being largely ascribed to population growth and ageing, with the largest increases observed in low- and middle-income countries. LBP is currently the leading cause of disability globally across all ages and in both sexes, while prevalence and disability estimates are consistently higher in females and older people. Among health conditions that may benefit from rehabilitation, LBP is the condition which represents the greatest number of people for whom benefits may be experienced. For these reasons, among others, LBP is an important global public health issue.

The prevalence, health burden and economic cost associated with LBP care and participation restriction continue to rise, care variation and critical knowledge and skills gaps among health workers persist, and delivery of care that is not evidence-based remains commonplace. No guideline has been produced that considers management of chronic LBP in adults, and in particular for older people, from a global public health perspective that takes into account universal health coverage (UHC) and the different levels of economic development across countries. The present guideline fills this gap, supports other activities undertaken by WHO in improving outcomes for adults with LBP and supports the WHO Integrated care for older people (ICOPE) approach in primary care – one of the action areas of the UN Decade of Healthy Ageing (2021–2030).

Most people who experience an episode of acute LBP experience time-limited, low-to-moderate levels of disability and a favourable clinical course. Often, the experience of LBP is recurrent, and acute episodes become more frequent in older age. In some people, concurrent spine-related leg pain may also be experienced. There is a group of people who experience persisting symptoms beyond three months, which is defined as chronic LBP. Chronic LBP is often associated with a reduced ability to participate in family, social and work roles, and incurs major costs to families, communities and health systems. People who experience chronic LBP, particularly older people, are more likely to experience poverty, prematurely exit the workforce and accumulate less retirement wealth. In all settings, disabling LBP and early retirement owing to chronic symptoms are more common among people with lower socioeconomic status, thus contributing to poverty and inequity. Optimizing the clinical management of people with chronic LBP is therefore a current priority for Member States.

Among older people, an experience of LBP is common and often gives rise to loss of physical and mental capacities (i.e. intrinsic capacity). For many older people, LBP is particularly burdensome because it restricts mobility and thus the ability to participate in society, thereby leading to psychosocial impacts. It is also associated with significant comorbidities and higher mortality, and is strongly related to a decrease in health-related quality of life, particularly when spine-related leg pain is also present. Concurrent musculoskeletal pain, loss of mobility, frailty, falls, urinary incontinence and poor sleep are important adverse health outcomes associated with chronic LBP in older people.

Purpose, scope and target audience

The purpose of the guideline is to provide evidence-based recommendations on non-surgical interventions for chronic primary LBP (CPLBP) in adults, including older people, that can be delivered in primary and community care settings to improve CPLBP-related health and well-being outcomes. For this reason, the guideline does not consider interventions typically delivered in secondary or tertiary care settings (e.g. surgical or other invasive procedures) or workplace interventions.

The target audience is health workers of all disciplines working in the primary and community care settings. In this context, the guideline is intended to be discipline neutral. The guidelines will be of use to clinical staff including medical doctors, nurses, allied health workers including chiropractors, occupational therapists, physiotherapists, pharmacists, psychologists and community health workers, as well as public health programme and system managers.

Chronic primary low back pain (CPLBP)

A persistent or recurrent pain experience of more than three months that is not reliably attributed to an underlying disease process or structural lesion.

Five classes of interventions for the management of CPLBP in adults were considered for the guideline: A) standardized and structured education; B) physical interventions; C) psychological interventions; D) medicines; and E) multicomponent interventions.

The guideline addresses the following overarching question:

"What are the health and well-being benefits and harms of non-surgical interventions in the management of chronic primary low back pain, with or without spine-related leg pain, in community-dwelling adults in primary or community care settings, including older people (60 years and older), compared with placebo, no intervention or usual care?"

The guideline does not consider surgical interventions, invasive intraspinous interventions or workplace interventions for people with CPLBP, primary prevention interventions for LBP, management of acute LBP or interventions for chronic secondary LBP.

Guideline development methods

The guideline was developed in accordance with the process described in the WHO handbook for guideline development. The development process was coordinated by the Ageing and Health Unit, with methods advice provided by an independent guidelines methodologist and governance oversight provided by the internal WHO Steering Group and WHO Guideline Review Committee. The external Guideline Development Group (GDG) was responsible for refining the scope of the guideline and defining the population, priority interventions for systematic evidence reviews, comparators and critical outcomes. The Grading of Recommendations Assessment, Development and Evaluation (GRADE) approach was used to appraise the certainty of the quantitative evidence for benefits and harms of each prioritized intervention. An evidence synthesis of qualitative studies examining the values and preferences for, and acceptability and feasibility of, the interventions and their outcomes from the perspective of older people was commissioned to support the GDG in formulating recommendations. Confidence in qualitative evidence synthesis findings was appraised using the GRADE-CERQual method. The GDG participated in three meetings to review and interpret evidence and formulate recommendations. The GDG formulated recommendations for each intervention based on the GRADE Evidence-to-Decision (EtD) approach for public health interventions. The independent methodologist guided the GDG in interpreting the evidence of benefits and harms, understanding GRADE certainty-of-evidence assessments and translating evidence into recommendations. This included assessment of the effects (balance of benefits and harms) of interventions on outcomes for people with CPLBP, and consideration of other EtD domains: the values and preferences of people with CPLBP and their families and health workers relating to the interventions and their outcomes, as well as the acceptability and feasibility of the interventions, resources required and equity. The GDG was responsible for determining the worthwhile benefit and risk of harm for an intervention based on effect-size estimates from the systematic reviews and other factors related to the delivery and accessibility of an intervention.

In general, conditional recommendations were made when overall certainty was low or very low, and/or when the judgements in other domains indicated variability or uncertainty. Conditional recommendations in favour suggest the intervention is recommended in most situations, but will not be suitable for everyone and, therefore, shared decision-making and considering appropriateness in certain populations or settings will be required. Conditional recommendations against use suggest the intervention is not recommended in most circumstances, since the harms (or other negative consequences beyond adverse health outcomes) probably outweigh the benefits. A good practice statement reflects a body of indirect evidence that is difficult to summarize and indicates that the desirable consequences of the intervention far outweigh its undesirable consequences and, as such, the intervention is recommended. For each intervention, WHO provides a recommendation other than in circumstances where no evidence was available, where the evidence was too limited to make a judgement, or where the balance between benefits and harms was so equivocal that a judgement could not be made with confidence.

Recommendations

The guideline considers 37 interventions across five intervention classes. There are 24 recommendations, one good practice statement and 12 interventions for which no recommendation was made (Table 1). Each recommendation is relevant to community-dwelling adults experiencing CPLBP, with or without spine-related leg pain. While the population definition allowed for the inclusion of comorbid spine-related leg pain, the GDG was not able to confidently interpret the effects of interventions in subpopulations with and without spine-related leg pain, since classification systems varied across trials and some trials did not report on spine-related leg pain prevalence. Where the included trials report outcomes separately for older people or included older people (adults aged 60 years and over) in their mean age range, or where evidence (direct or indirect) of harms is also relevant to older people, the recommendations also refer to older people. The GDG provided supporting commentaries for its recommendations. These remarks or key considerations are intended to contextualize the recommendations and provide additional guidance for implementation into practice. The GDG foregrounded its recommendations around four guiding principles: i) holistic and person-centred care; ii) equity; iii) care that is non-stigmatizing and non-discriminatory; and iv) integrated and coordinated care. Clinical practice considerations have also been formulated to support interpretation and translation of the recommendations into practice, service delivery and policy. These broadly include: i) arranging clinical assessment and timely referral, where indicated; ii) providing personalized information and advice; iii) delivering interventions that address the range of factors contributing to a person's CPLBP experience; and iv) selecting and sequencing interventions according to the needs and preferences of the person with CPLBP. For medicines, the GDG foregrounded its recommendations with supporting commentaries around safe medication practices applicable to all medicines, with additional attention to opioid analgesics.

Twelve "no recommendations" were made. The balance between benefits and harms for three psychological interventions and non-pharmacological weight loss were so equivocal that a recommendation could not be made. The GDG judged that there was insufficient evidence to make a recommendation for five herbal medicines, while no evidence was available concerning the therapeutic use of three medicines to allow recommendations for these products to be formulated: paracetamol (acetaminophen), benzodiazepines and cannabis-related pharmaceutical preparations. Nonetheless, the GDG considered it important to provide guidance on the use of these three products in particular, given their use in clinical practice (see Box 1).

Box 1:
Key considerations for paracetamol (acetaminophen), benzodiazepines and cannabis-related pharmaceutical preparations for therapeutic use.

Paracetamol (acetaminophen) is associated with potential cardiovascular, renal and gastrointestinal harms and increased mortality risk, particularly in older people with hepatic or renal impairment. Although paracetamol is commonly used as a first-line analgesic medicine, available evidence for its use in acute LBP suggests it is not superior to placebo in reducing pain, and there is no biological reason why a different effect would be observed in CPLBP.

Benzodiazepines are associated with potential harms including memory impairment, misuse, overdose deaths from respiratory depression, somnolence, fatigue and light-headedness potentially leading to falls. Other complications of long-term use of benzodiazepines include development of tolerance, dependence and withdrawal syndrome particularly after abrupt cessation, which can be life-threatening. The unknown efficacy of benzodiazepines in CPLBP and risk of harms suggests benzodiazepines would not be an appropriate first-line medicine choice for CPLBP.

Cannabis-related pharmaceutical preparations for therapeutic use are not likely to be an appropriate first-line medicine for the management of CPLBP due to a lack of direct evidence of benefit in this condition and evidence of possible adverse events, including harms associated with its non-medicinal use.

Interpreting recommendations and their implementation

The recommended interventions are intended to be implemented by countries as a suite of likely effective intervention options to support adults with CPLBP. Given the multifactorial and complex aetiology of CPLBP, a single intervention in isolation may be inadequate to confer benefit, thereby rationalizing the need to provide a suite of effective intervention options from which health workers can select, tailor and sequence according to the unique needs, preferences and circumstances of individuals, guided by a biopsychosocial perspective and the context of the local health system. For those interventions with conditional against recommendation, discontinuation of routine delivery is recommended in most situations.
